PATTI'S DECLINE. IRY CARLS TO THE TRIBUNE. Copyright; 1888; By The New-York Tribune.

London, Oct. 20 -An eulogist, given somewhat to derangement of epithets, described the object of hi panegyric as uniting the prudence of the iton with the strength of the serpent. Lord Sackville, whose collateral ancestor and predecessor in the title which he now bears, displayed prudence not altogether leoning Minden, may possess the strength of the serpent but is less prudent than even the most cautious and circumspect of lions. The letter which is now engaging public attention on both sides of the Atlantic, and which most probably formed a topic of after-dinner talk between Lord Salisbury and Mr. It will probably bring Lord Sackville's mission at Washington to a close and will possibly defeat Mr. Cleveland. In the last century, spend-thrifts in Paris called their creditors "les Anglais" because they were so easily taken in. Lord Sackville this noble tradition of the national character. The best way of preventing Lord Sackville from having in future enything to do with American politics is for him to come home. But the past cannot be undone. He has taken part in American politics. Already Mr. Cleveland is denounced as England's man and as the British, not the American, candidate for the turn a good many votes against him. The one thing which a country will not stand is foreign intermeddling with domestic matters. The suspicion that intrigue were directed against Lord Palmerston, and Lord John ssell's declaration that his noble friend would be the Minister, not of France, Austria or Russia, but of England, were decisive in his favor.

Lord Sackville's resignation, recall or dismissal will not undo the mischlef he has done, which will 'car fruits not only in the next Presidential election, but during the next Presidential term. Questions which might have been settled may be kept open. Estrange-ment which might have been prevented may be oc-

DOINGS OF BOYALTY.

The Prince and Princess of Wales will give their annual ball at Sandringham on Friday week to celebrate their Royal Highnesses' birthday in the customary manner. The invitations particularly request all guests to go out of mourning. As the Prince has a great dislike to any appearance of gloom at festivi-ties held on such an occasion, it was thought that the Sandringham County ball would possibly be postponed till the period of mourning for the late Emperor had elapsed. But hospitalities given by Prince at his country residence are not regarded as The ball which will be held on the 9th proximo is simply given in courtesy to their Royal Highnesses' friends and neighbors in Norfolk.

The Princess of Wales never looked better nor stronger than she did last week. There is no doubt health was greatly benefited by her recent solourn abroad. Her eldest daughter has ceased to suffer from the violent attacks of neuralgia which at one time caused considerable anxiety. During their brief stay in London the Prince and incess of Wales went twice to the play, and on Wednesday evening the Princess took her daughter to dine quietly with Lady Randolph Churchill in Con-

The Prince of Wales continues to experience the orst of bad luck with his racchorse purchases, There was not a solitary bid for Royalist, who cost 3,100 guineas as a yearling, when offered for sale last week, and in addition to Huntington tower, Montgomerie has been turned out of training HASTENING THE TURF SCANDAL CASE. Owing to Lord Durham's auxiety to winter abroad. every effort is being made to accelerate the great turf scandal arbitration case in which his Lordship and Sir George Chetwynd are opponents.

IMPECUNIOUS KING MILAN.

King Milan's prolonged stay at the baths of Gleichenberg, has provoked much gossip at Vienna, where it has latterly been rumored that he was really unable to leave there, having been, in fact, detained for debt. King Milan has long been in difficulties, but now he has neither money nor credit. A few years ago he lost 30,000 pounds at the Nobles' Club, Vienna, which was paid for him by Emperor Francis Joseph, on condition that he promised on his word of honor to play no more. However, this pledge was quickly broken, valuable ancestral possession, a magnificent sword covered all over with precions stones which Czar Nicholas gave to Prince Milesch. The sword is now at either Berlin or Vienna, and the interest on the sum which was lent on it has accumulated to a very

MR. PARNELL AND BYRNE. One very significant thing has happened in the libel action at Edinburgh of Mr. Parnell against "The Mr. Parnell has withdrawn from the action one part of the alleged libel, in which "The Times" ac cuses him of having lent Byrne money to escape after the Phoenix Park murders. But he continues the action on all other points. What does this mean? TO DISCUSS FAMILY MATTERS AT BALMORAL.

The Prince of Wales, who left Mariborough House on Friday for Balmoral, has gone to see the Queen on family matters. Those who know say that the visit is for that purpose only. The state of affairs in the German Royal Family is very delicate, and the Prince wished to see the Queen before the arrival of

A CONTEST OF LORD SACKVILLE'S WILL Although the late Lord Sackville's bequests do not after all, include any of the beirlooms at Knole. and refer only to such furniture and pictures as he himself brought there, I hear that the younger brothers intend disputing the validity of the will. It is a matter of notoriety that Lord Sackville never recovered from the mental shock occasioned by the death of The will which was made in July differed materially from one executed in January. During the summer he entertained several delusions. In con-sequence of one of these hallucinations he wrote to a obleman strongly complaining of a personal affront said to have been offered him by a well-known and most inoffensive member of the corps diplomatique who had never even seen him. The present Lord Sackville does not intend to reside at Knole, the ancient home of the Sackvilles. It will, however, be kept up, and next year is once more to be thrown open

DR. MACKENZIE TO LECTURE. Sir Morell Mackenzie has been asked to deliver an address on December 4 before the Philosophical Institution of Edinburgh. "Song and Speech" will be the subject of his lecture.

In spite of adverse criticism the sale of "Prederick the Noble" during the past fortnight nearly reached one hundred thousand copies. THE CAUSE OF BOULANGER'S POPULARITY. In any country but France the popularity of General Boulanger would be incomprehensible. In reality I believe it to be due purely to the physical aspect of the General, to his commonplace good looks and his fashion-plate elegance. As M. Capoul used to trouble the calm of thousands of fair admirers, so now General Boulanger fascinates the French, men and women alike, owing to that decline of masculinity which is one of the singular phenomena of modern France.

THE DECLINE OF MADAME PATTI.

The directors of that essentially immoral establishment, the Paris Grand Opera, have valuiy attempted to create a sensation by announcing with much trans-parent puffery that the role of "Juliet" in Gounod's new opera will be created by Madame Patti, now in the forty-sixth year of her age, and several times retour d'Amerique. If Madame Patti wishes to avoid bitter disappointment, for which, however, she may find herself compensated by gold, she will not sing at the Grand Opera. The whole press will be against ber, and none but the Spanish-South American colony will applaud her. Paris, decadent as it is, is not yet comparable to Chicago or Buenos Ayres. A souvenir of a concert which the travelling diva gave at the Eder a few years ago is still fresh in our memories. temember the mediocre programme, the beggarly troupe, the battahon of lackeys that brought in bouquets the noisy claque and all the vulgar tricks that Barnum, Strakosch and Abbey have invented to excite the foolish enthusiasm of exotic audiences. We remember her voice that had then lost the exquisite treshness of former years. We remember the tricky virtuosite placed always at the service of maccaronic We remember the regrets of critics and elomaniacs as they reflected that La Patti had

s wandering star, a melodious acrobat who never reated a single role, in the decline of her talent and beauty. It is more than absurd for Madame Patti to dream of astonishing Parisians by creating "Juliet."

SUPPLYING PARIS WITH HANSOMS. A novel experiment is about to be made in Paris in the establishment of a cab company. Lord Shrewsbury, chairman, with a plant of 300 hansoms fitted with rubber tires, drawn by English horses. Lord Shrewsbury goes to Paris Saturday week to superintend the development of the undertaking, in which from observations made during a visit to the French capital last year, he has the fullest belief EDMUND YATES.

ACTORS AND THEIR PLAYS.

In spite of "Jonah" and the "Brass Monkey," the Bijou Theatre is packed nightly by people who want to relieve their pent-up feelings by induiging in a wild, untrammelled burst of boisterous laughter.

There was no material change in the bill at Dock stader's Minstrels, but the performance was received as warmly and the fun went as merrily as ever.

"The Paymaster" acquainted the down-town theatre goer with his woes, heroism and lovemaking at Nibio's last night. The house was well filled, and the various incidents and scenes, particularly those in which that potential factor in later-day melodramatics—the tank ore a prominent part, were greeted with the usual demonstrations of approval. Harry Morgan, as the English sergeant, was a great improvement over his predecessor in the part, and Mrs. Duncan B. Harrison ore than filled Mrs. Patrick William O'Sullivan Dimpfel's place, both in personal charms and in acting "The Paymaster" will remain at Niblo's only this week.

Frank Mayo and his company appeared at the Grand Touse last night in his favorite play.

The adventures of D'Artag-nan will be repeated to-night. To-morrow "Nornan will be repeated to-night. To-morrow "Nor-deck" will be given, and on Thursday evening "Davy Crockett" will be revived.

Several new features were added to the bill at Tony Pastor's Theatre last night. The more importan ones were Vernon Grey, an English ventrile the Coulson sisters, serio-comics; Harry La Rose, Thomas Ryan and Mai Richfield. Tony Pastor also introduced a new song, which received more than

The audience was numerous and more than warm in its welcome to the piece and those of the cast who were seen in the former production at the same theatre. Appreciative applause was also bestowed upon the work of the new-comers, Mitchell, Miss Fannie Stevens and Miss Nellie Lyford.

A theatre party of 150 ladies and gentlemen from Jersey City attended the performance of "V Googan" at Harrigan's Park Theatre last night.

The first Actors' Fund benefit of the season will be given at the Grand Opera House on Thursday afternoon, November 15. Dixey the "Mr. Barnes of New-York" company, Louis Aldrich, Harrigan's "Waddy Googan" company, Lew Dockstader, Mrs. Alice Shaw, Gus Williams, Tony Pastor and Marshall P. Wilder.

Rehearsals of "The Fugitive" began at the Standard Theatre yesterday morning The piece will open in Boston on November 12, and will be seen in this city at the Star Theatre after the holidays.

There are only two more weeks of "Lord Chumley" at the Lyceum Theatre. Next week, the final one, three matinees of the play will be given-Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

Wesley Sisson writes from Chicago that A. M. Palmer's Madisen Square Theatre Company close its summer tour there Saturday night. During the last two weeks "Partners," "Our Society" and "Hear of Hearts" were presented. The former play was received with the most favor, and did an exceeding large business for the week of its run. Mr. Sisson adds that Maud Harrison came on from New-Vord expressly to play her original part of Mrs. Tupper, but hurried back to the metropolis as the reporters made her life miserable with their efforts to extract an admission from her regarding her rumored mariage. Marie Euroughs and Annie Russell, he adds, were the recipients of much social attention in San Francisco and Chicago.

Francisco and Chicago.

Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett arrived nere from St. Louis yesterday afternoon by a sperial truin of nine cars. The distinguished tragedians are in the best of health and spirits, but were too much fatigued from their journey yesterday to be interviewed concerning their tour and their plans for the future. They will devote the next two weeks to peparing for their engagement at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, which opens November 12, for an extended scason. The first week will be devoted to elaborate revivals of "Othello" and "The Merchant of Venice." which will be prescried on alternate nights. The productions for the fellowing weeks have not yet been decided upon.

ME. MANSFIELD TO STAY A YEAR IN LONDON.

Richard Mansfield, the popular American actor, who has attained a lofty position in dramatic art, has been so successful in London that he will remain there not only throughout the winter, but during the Mr. Mansfield's tenancy of the Lyceum Theatre will close on December 1, when Henry Irving returns to take possession of the house, but Mr. Mansfield has secured the lease of the Globe Theatre, near the Strand, and will be its sole lessee. "Prince Karl' has proved to be a great success in every way in London, and after the close of his season at the Lyceum Mr. Mansfield will continue the run of " Prince Karl" at the Globe. After the popularity of "Prince Karl" shall have been exhausted, which is Ekely to be at a distant date, he will have plenty of new material. His first production then will be "Chloot, the Jester," written by Walter Besant and Walter Pollock, of "The Saturday Review." He also has a new play by Henry Arthur Jones and a play by Richard Davidge, who wrote "Lesbia," the little classical piece which Mr. Mansfield has been giving as a part of the evening's entertainment at the Lyceun It is possible that Mr. Mansfield may produce "Richard III." in London, as many of his friends have expressed a strong desire to see him in that part

He will retain his present company, and has strength ened it by the engagement of Carlotta Leclerq. E. D. Price, manager for Mr. Mansfield,, who is now in this country, will sail on the City of Rome on Saturday to join his chief.

The brilliant success and prosperity of Mr. Mans-field abroad will be hailed with feelings of the strongest satisfaction by his great number of American friends and admirers, who have watched his constant progress onward and upward with increasing admiration.

THE VERESTONAGIN WAR PAINTINGS. M. Vasili Verestchagin supplies the information that his exhibition of war paintings and brie-a-brac will be ready for opening about November 10 at the American Art Galleries. There are twenty-eight men at work day and night in the galleries, preparing for this occasion. Many of the paintings are already hung, and the work is made particularly laborious by reason of the great size and weight of the pictures and their frames. One canvas measures 28x20 feet, and a number of others are nearly as large. There is a Persian rug 38 feet by 30 and so heavy that sixteen men could hardly carry it upstairs from the street to the gallery. It is one of the largest and finest rugs in the world, and of great value. Every inch of space on the walls and cellings of the American Galleries, together with several adjoining lofts that have been specially engaged, will be covered with paintings, tapestries, weapons and curios collected by M. Verestchagin in all parts of the world. This artist does not sell his pictures, which have been painted for the express purpose of exhibition. They have been shown three times in St. Petersburg, twice in London, twice in Paris and once in Vienna, and enough has been written about them by European art critics to fill sixty-eight huge scrap-books. DR. AGNEW DECIDING NOT TO RESIGN.

Philadelphia, Oct. 29 (Special.—Dr. J. William White, of the University of Pennsylvania, said to-day that Dr. Hayes Agnew, head of the surgical department at the university, had been prevailed upon to retain his professorship. Dr. Agnew confirmed this and said :

My private practice demands so much of my tim that I am obliged to give up some of it or give up the university. Here, for instance, are two telegrams calling me out of the city to-day. I must be at the university to lecture at noon, and I can't do both. I have always made it a rule to attend to the university first, as it has a prior claim. Still, it grows a little monotonous, and I would prefer to devote myself to my profession purely. There has been one resignation from the faculty this year, however, and it won't do to have too many. us in this announcement that There were suggestions in this announcement that Mr. Seixas's choler had risen, for it is certainly unusual for any one to offer $150 as a reward on account of a $5 robbery. Mr. Seixas is a lawyer and has his ffice at No. 254 Broadway. A Tribune reporter called on him there yesterday, and found him to be one whose manner smacks far more of good than of ill nature. After considerable persuasion he said:

You know Greenwich is a little Eden, and my neighbors and I have ideal little homes there. There are a few ham-fatter families in the neighborhood, however, who make it a painful habit to rob our larders. Why, I supfinally up. OR. M'GLYNN FOR HARRISON AND MILLER. From The Pittsburg Press.

From The Pittsburg Press.

Dr. McGlynn, of New-York, was a Pittsburg visitor this morning, returning to his home after a rather extended Western tour.

Dr. McGlynn is squarely out and out for Warner Miller, the Republican candidate for Governor of New-York. The United Labor party, of which Dr. McGlynn is at the head in New-York, he says is no longer neutral as far as the State campaign is conceined, but well vote and work almost to a man for the election of Miller and the downfall of Governor Hill.

I.
When autumn boughs tossed wild 'gainst autumn skies, And showering downward came all gold and red The flying swarms of leaves to mossy bed-

Brilliant as sunset when the wild day dies-There came to me from where that calm sea lies A letter from a duck who asked that I Would counsel him, and I could not deny; But woe the day when stopped I to advise, or in I clapped my foot above the knee, And made a break which drove away my smile;

Lord Sackville !- 'twas name that all accorded me-Thus all my joy at one fell swoop is gone, And I am Cleveland's Burchard here alone !

I would not thus in ashes sit and sigh Were I at home 'cross the dividing sea, For my dread sov'reign herself would comfort me, For my dread sovreign herself would comfort me, And hid me rise and stanch the flowing eye; But here, though Bayard and Cleveland are both nigh, They dore not speak to me one word of cheer— Till comes election their lips are closed with fear, While I must stand nor think to strike nor fly Oh. heavy woe, that I thus bilked should be.
That "Lori" to "Burchard" thus should dimly fade

Oh, greater woe, that I could not foresee That it would harm the cause I wished to aid.

BURIAL OF LEE YU DOO.

LAST HONORS TO THE BLACK FLAGS CHIEF. WITH BANDS PLAYING AND BANNERS FLYING

THE PROCESSION GOES THROUGH THE STREETS-A MOB AT THE GRAVE. Never in America, say the Chinamen of Mottst., has one of their countrymen been buried with such elaborate ritual and gravevard cere mony as attended the burial yesterday of the dead General of the Black Flags, Lee Yu Doo. Seventy carriages filled with Chinamen followed the body from Mott-st. to the Chinese plot in Evergreens Cemetery. Four Chinamen watched the black cloth-covered coffin in Naughton's undertaking shop, at No. 57 Nott-st., for the ten days since the chieftain died, their meals being brought in to them.

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning the services began in the little shop. On tables in the place were placed frosted confectionery, three roast chickens, a young pig, cooked brown, and bowls of rice, two wicker-covered bottles of wine, and numberless plates of preserves. Large bouquets of white flowers and a costly pillow of immortelles added their aroma to the incense of urning joss-sticks. The coffin lid was open, and scattered on the breast of the dead General were cardboard praying cards to keep away the evil spirits.

THE DRESS OF CHINESE PRIESTS. First came five or six solemn-faced Mongolians arrayed in gorgeous blue tunies, with blue trousers wrapped tightly around their legs below the These were priests and they ministered oil and rice to the communicants, who drifted into the shop in pairs, clad in purple and yellow, until the place was filled with them. the priests had finished with the rice and wine, a onic ceremonial was held, officiated over by Masonic chief from this city and one from Chicago, for the dead man was a Mason of high legree, and the square and compass between the two columns capped by globes were engraved on the silver lid of his coffin along with his name and the date of his birth and death. Banners and lanterns, and two Chinese bands of four pieces each, were added to the company in the room. The cymbals crashed and two withered Chinamen pounded a brass gong and a drum continuously, and one musician performed on a flute and one on a Chinese fiddle during the last ceremony. Twelve pall-bearers in yellow blouses chanted a dirge in memory of the dead, in which all his good deeds were mentioned.

At 2 o'clock a hearse drawn by four black horses drove up to the front door and the pallbearers lifted up the coffin and carried it to the hearse, while Lowell's hand (white) played a dirge. Then a Chinaman dressed in black with a black and red turban about his head and prayer cards in his hands climbed up beside the driver of the hearse, and the procession formed and at 2 o'clock started for the cemetery. A struggling crowd of ten thousand people choked Mott-st. to see it start and crowds viewed the strange spectacle all along the route. Six broad-shouldered policemen cleared the way and after them came mounted on gray horses three Chinese marshals. One rode in advance of the other two and carried an American sword, wore a National Guard sash and belt and bore aloft a gorgeous heart-shaped paper banner ar, and when we discovered him he was cooking himself a jetters "C. F. M. S." This was the banner of the with the words "Lung Gee Tong" on it and the society to which the dead man belonged. banner pictured the sacred front of the Tien Sar Mountain. Next followed Lowell's band playing a dirge, then came Chinamen with black turbans his pocket sitting on a cracker barrel with the thief, swapping lies in the greatest harmony. The next day some one stole my neighbor's chickens and distributed them among his friends, and the night after that all the remanants of provisions in our cellar disappeared. Then I adveitised, and if I don't get evidence to convict the thief, I'll find out who he is and knock him silly with a ciub.

Then flowers were planted above the newly-made grave, and three roast chickens and bowls of rice and little finger caps were laid alonside, while two bottles of wine were poured on the damp earth and all was over. Each Chinaman made an obeisance. Scarcely had the last of the Chinamen turned their backs before the mob had stripped the grave of the food left there to be eaten by the dead General of the Black Flags, or to be used to propitiate the evil spirits. There was a rumor that Lee Yu Doo had $500 in his left hand when buried, and there his agreement helief that his grave will be tampered

WHEN HAWTHORNE WROTE "THE SCARLET LETTER."

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good out of evil found a pretty illustration in the case of Hawthorne's removal from office. He was crushed by the blow, and staggered to his humble home full of bitter disappointment. No one knew him then as one of our greatesi—yes, the world's greatest—men of gentus. His wife queetly left the room, says Conway, then came back with an armful of wood, kindled a cheerful fre, drew his chair up to the desk, brought papers, pens and ink, and then, turning to him with a beaming face, said: "Now you can write your book." The result was "The Scarlet Letter," and such fame as no novelist in America before or since has attained. It was all due to his noble wife. Had she repined and added to this burden the world would never have known Hawthorne.

THE CAPE COD CANAL.

General Silas Seymour, of New-York, the eminent civil engineer, has been engaged by New-York parties who are interested in the Cape Cod ship canal to make a thorough examination of that work, and report upon the engineering questions involved in connection with the location and construction of the canal and its approaches. He visited Sandwich last week, and spent several days in making a careful inspection of the kine between Barnstable Bay and Buzzard's Bay, in-cluding Lockwood's huge steam excavator, now working at the easterly end of the canal, and also in examining the movements of the tides and currents. It is understood that he approves of the route selected for the canal, and also the plans and specifications which have been prepared to govern its completion, and will make a favorable report upon these matters, as well as upon the question relating to the probable revenue to be derived from the operation of the canal.
